Is the Whole Run As Good As the Sum of It's Parts

By Lynn Kohr
www.kohrquarterhorss.com

Making run after run on our barrel horses can escalate problems more often than it does to peak our horses for their best run. Peaking for our best competition run has been a challenge forever and a challenge that takes careful thought, planning and even luck to attain the perfect competition run. By working on the different parts of a run, strengthening, sharpening and quickening the slower, weaker parts of our barrel patterns builds a strong, fresh, tuned "whole" to our barrel runs.

First of all, double check that you have your horse fit, sound and feeling as good as your expertise allows you.

Secondly, make a mental exam of your barrel run. Identify areas lacking sharpness. Does your horse take any extra steps in his turns? In a competition run, is your horse requiring you to help and support more than normal?

Thirdly, let's take apart your barrel run and break it down into different segments...go through the following steps and anywhere you feel is slow, weak, or just not strong and full of forward motion, spend enough time on it so that both you and your horse are confident and mindful of all of the steps...then putting all of the parts together will build a stronger and more consistent barrel run for both you and your horse partner.

Fit, Sound and Feeling Good? The importance of fitness is easy to overlook. Having a balanced fitness program adds to our horse's lung capacity and run recovery time. As an added benefit, a fit horse supports soundness since strong healthy muscles get sore less often and strong fit muscles withstand slips and over extensions better. An effective fitness program always includes a mixture of long slow distance, sprint workouts, arena work and down time (rest and relaxation time to heal and recover) mixed with a feeding program that provides appropriate energy for our horse's workload.

Once in a while a thorough lameness exam can be eye opening in evaluating our horse's soreness and as always it is wise to have a starting baseline to compare future exams to. Being aware of sudden changes in your horse: new and unusual stiffness, drastic change in their runs, unreasonable behavior, changed eating pattern, all set off red flags of concern. Follow up on any of these! You know your horse better than anyone!

Make a mental exam of your barrel run. What parts of your barrel run feel your weakest? Are your turns quick and consistent? Is your horse taking any extra steps in a turn? Will your horse sprint the moment when you ask him? Is your horse running right to your spots and running home hard? How much do you have to guide your horse through your run? Ask yourself these questions or similar ones to define where in your run, you and your horse could use a bit of work and fine tuning.

Workshop exercises on the parts of a barrel run.

Sprints! Could your horse use a sprint or two or would that make him hotter? I am a fan of at least some sprint workouts and adding a feathering down to the end of a sprint, being mindful to keep my horse between my reins and legs, all the while keeping their body aligned. I sometimes do a sprint from corner to corner of the arena, using the arena fence to feather down to a stop, taking about three strides in the feather down and having my horse softly slow down staying in a straight line.

All rights or all lefts... use this exercise until both right turns and left turns are balanced and even, doing more on whatever side needs work to balance the stronger side. I like to set up an even triangle. We are accustomed to having a third barrel set farther down the arena, so, be sure to make an even distance triangle.

I then, riding around the outside of the whole triangle, do all right turns, going only as fast as both me and my horse can make a smooth and efficient turn. I can turn up the speed as needed and slow down as a reward to a relaxed quiet turn. After your right turn feels smooth, quiet and your horses steps are even, change to the left repeating the whole exercise.

The Double Back Drill. After you both get the triangle exercise down, I mix it up with my favorite, Judy Myllymaki drill, the double back. I trot up to a turn, drop to a walk and go all the way around the barrel then double back around the same barrel another time but at a trot. I also really get great results by doing this drill at a lope! Be sure to go to the right and to the left until both you and your horse are comfortable and relaxed with the footwork!

Collection. Collection, ah, with a bit of collection, even the tightest turning horse can find some room around their barrel. Collection is my catch all to many of the weak places in my horses' runs. Walk your horse up to a single barrel, ask them to come back to light pressure on your reins, rounding at your horse's pole and through their backs, while strongly walking up underneath themselves. Walk around the whole barrel turn. Only after you have your horse walk rounded and softly around the whole barrel turn, let them lengthen and stretch down with their neck and stride. This builds lower back strength and stride strength. Your horse will really tell you where in his turn that this is difficult, be gentle yet persistent until you and your horse can be rounded and forward the whole way around a turn and to each direction. Once you both have mastered this at a walk, give it a try at a trot!

Keep in touch with the parts of your horse's barrel run: strengthen weaker areas, sharpen up footwork and know you have your horse sound, fit and feeling good. This will surely enhance your horse's peak performance! Make your whole run greater than the sum of its parts. Good Luck and Happy Trails!

By Sherry Morrison
Triple M (Mike Morrison Ministries)

Spring is the time of rebirth and renewing. We see baby calves and lambs and foals peeking out from behind their mothers. The grass, which looked so brown and dead, is greening up and the bare trees are coming to life.

It's time to remember that Jesus rose from the dead. He overcame death so we need have no fear. He paid for our sins and paved the way for us to not only have eternal life when we die but also to have abundant life while we live on earth.

God loves us so much He "gave his only begotten Son that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." (John 3:16) If you had a friend who saved you from drowning, pulled you from a burning building or took a bullet for you, you would be ever so grateful to that person. How is it that so many people go about their lives and rarely even think of God?

How much more we should honor God for what He has done. A friend might save your earthly life but God saved you for life everlasting. Some cultures believe that if someone saves your life, your life then belongs to that person. That's a good way to think about Jesus. We owe Him everything. Not only does His death and resurrection save us for eternity but His shed blood cleanses us from all sin. It says in 1 John 1:9 that if we confess our sins to Him, He is faithful to forgive us. He also does not remember them anymore after they are forgiven (Hebrews 8:12).

We are so blessed to know Jesus and to have heard the good news of the Gospel. If Jesus is your best friend you have nothing to fear in this life or the next! Make sure you get to know Him well. He'll meet you where you are!!

Mike Morrison and his wife Sherry are ordained ministers in their own non-denominational church in Gillette, WY. They also travel widely as circuit riders ministering over a large area of the western states.
